2. BACKGROUND:

According to the FDA, E.A. Sween Company announced the voluntary recall of 12,600 Deli Express Turkey & Cheese Sandwiches because they have the potential to be contaminated with Listeria monocytogenes, an organism that can cause infections in young children, frail or elderly people, and others with weakened immune systems. The DSCP Consumer Safety Office has learned that several Department of Defense (DoD) locations received the Deli Express Turkey and Cheese Sandwiches. Most of the locations are military shoppettes and exchanges. Routine sampling of the product revealed that a single sandwich in the lot contained Listeria monocytogenes. This specific lot of product has been recalled as a precautionary measure. No illnesses have been reported related to this voluntary recall. No other Deli Express® products are affected by this voluntary recall.
